Toward World Antitrust and Market Access	Eleanor M. Fox 1
Anticipating a trade and competition agenda for the World Trade Organization, Professor Fox analyzes the international dimension of private restraints of trade and argues that liberalized world trade calls for a symbiotic liberal competition principle assuring no unreasonable restraint of market access. She proposes that all nations adopt a nonparochial antitrust law prohibiting unreasonable bars to market access, and a procedural system assuring victims' rights of enforcement; and she contemplates solving the problem of varying national formulations by a choice-of-law principle.
Environmental Security and Freshwater Resources: Ecosystem Regime Building	26
Jutta Brunnée and Stephen J. Toope This article evaluates existing freshwater regimes and offers suggestions for the elaboration of future regimes that can promote environmental security. The authors argue that ecosystem-oriented principles are essential to shaping effective freshwater regimes as they evolve along a continuum from dialogue and sharing of information, to more defined frameworks of cooperation, to binding legal norms. They suggest that this process of regime formation and consolidation will further benefit from an emphasis on implementation and dispute avoidance, rather than on enforcement and dispute settlement.
