Resolving Cross-Strait Relations Between China and Taiwan
Jonathan I. Charney & J. R. V. Prescott	453
The dispute between China and Taiwan has persisted despite changes within Taiwan and China, in their mutual relations, and in those with others. As a consequence of advancements in international law, particularly human rights and self-determination, the authors suggest that all of these changes will have to be brought to bear in order to secure a peaceful resolution of the dispute.
Norms and Institutions in Global Competition Policy
Daniel K. Tarullo	478
Proposals for new international competition-policy arrangements often fail to distinguish between the sometimes-conflicting aims of market access and consumer protection. The institutional venue for such arrangements will always affect substantive policy. Consequently, the author contends that an international competition-policy arrangement housed in the WTO will undesirably favor market access over competition.
