ASIL 2011-2012 Academic Partnership

Whether by publishing the award-winning American Journal of International Law, hosting the world's largest annual gathering of international law experts, or conducting programs serving students and faculty, the American Society of International Law has maintained strong partnerships with the academic community for over a century.

ASIL's Academic Partnership Program was launched in 2006 with four schools; last year, the program included 42 institutions – see the list of our 2010-2011 Academic Partners below. Its popularity is simple, enabling academic institutions to promote their programs and faculty, stay current on new developments, and signal their leadership in a growing field.
