Agora: Reflections on President Obama’s War Powers Legacy

President Obama’s War Powers Legacy
Curtis A. Bradley  625

Obama’s AUMF Legacy
Curtis A. Bradley and Jack L. Goldsmith  628

The 2001 Authorization for Use of Military Force (AUMF) remains the principal legal foundation under U.S. domestic law for the president to use force against and detain members of terrorist organizations. This essay explains how the Obama administration established the AUMF as the legal foundation for indefinite conflict against Al Qaeda, associated groups, and the Islamic State. It also shows that the administration’s claim that international law operated as an important constraint on its actions under the AUMF was belied, on a range of issues, by its interpretations of international law that supported presidential discretion and flexibility.

The Obama Administration, International Law, and Executive Minimalism
Ashley S. Deeks  646

The Bush administration took a maximalist approach to the jus ad bellum and jus in bello, staking out broad claims about what international law permitted in resorting to force and detaining and interrogating Al Qaeda members. In contrast, the Obama administration established more minimalist policies, which authorized a narrower scope of action than what international law permits. The Obama approach improved relations with allies and deferred difficult interagency debates. But it also incurred costs by slowing the development of international law and making it more difficult for other states to interpret the precedential value of U.S. actions.

The Obama Administration and Targeting “War-Sustaining” Objects in Noninternational Armed Conflict
Ryan Goodman  663

President Barack Obama embraced what many in the international law community long regarded as off-limits: targeting war-sustaining capabilities, like economic infrastructure used to generate revenue for an enemy’s armed forces. Scholarly opinion generally maintains that such objects are not legitimate military targets, but the academic literature is highly deficient. Scholars have not grappled with the strongest and clearest evidence supporting the U.S. view. Indeed, intellectual resources may be better spent not on the question whether such objects are legitimate military targets, but on second-order questions including how to apply proportionality analysis and identify limiting principles to guard against slippery slopes.
The Obama War Powers Legacy and the Internal Forces That Entrench Executive Power
Rebecca Ingber 680

In exploring the Obama war powers legacy, this essay examines the systemic forces inside the executive branch that influence modern presidential decision making and, barring a total reimagining of the executive branch, will operate on administrations to come. These mechanisms and norms fall broadly within two categories: (1) features that favor continuity and hinder presidents from effecting change, including both novel assertions of executive power and attempts to dial back that power; and (2) features that incrementally aggrandize such power claims. Together, these two sets of forces operate as a one-way ratchet, slowly expanding and ultimately entrenching executive branch power.

Constitutional War Initiation and the Obama Presidency
Michael D. Ramsey 701

This essay assesses the constitutionality of President Barack Obama’s uses of military force. It uses two baselines: the Constitution’s original meaning, and the practice of U.S. presidents between the end of the Vietnam War and the beginning of the Obama presidency. Although Obama has been criticized for expanding the president’s unilateral powers to use military force, this essay concludes that these claims may overstate. Taken as a whole, the legacy of the Obama administration may be to decrease, rather than expand, the war initiation powers of the presidency.

Current Developments
Protection of Persons in the Event of Disasters and Other Topics: The Sixty-Eighth Session of the International Law Commission
Sean D. Murphy 718

International Decisions
Edited by David P. Stewart

Featured Decision: Marine Entitlements in the South China Sea: The Arbitration Between the Philippines and China (Lucy Reed and Kenneth Wong) 746
Award under Annex VII to the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea concerning maritime entitlements to living and nonliving resources

Nasr v. Italy (Vassilis Pergantis) 761
European Court of Human Rights judgment on Italy’s involvement in an extra-judicial transfer pursuant to a CIA extraordinary rendition

Al-Dulimi v. Switzerland (Alexander Orakhelashvili) 767
European Court of Human Rights decision on compatibility of UN sanctions obligations with individual rights under the European Convention

Philip Morris Brands Sàrl v. Oriental Republic of Uruguay (Nicole D. Foster) 774
International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes award on public health measures regulating packaging and sale of tobacco products

De Leopoldo López (Nicholas Petrie) 781
Chilean Supreme Court decisions on universal jurisdiction over alleged mistreatment by Venezuela of its citizens in Venezuela

Contemporary Practice of the United States Relating to International Law
Edited by Kristina Daugirdas and Julian Davis Mortenson

Iran and United States Continue to Implement Nuclear Deal, Although Disputes Persist 789
United States Continues to Challenge Chinese Claims in South China Sea; Law of the Sea Tribunal Issues Award Against China in Philippines-China Arbitration 795
U.S. Navy Report Concludes That Iran’s 2015 Capture of U.S. Sailors Violated International Law 802
United States Justifies Its Use of Force in Libya Under International and National Law 804
U.S. Drone Strike Kills Taliban Leader in Pakistan 811

The Department of Defense Clarifies Legal Protections for Journalists in Updated Law of War Manual

Federal Court of Claims Finds That Settlement Without Compensation of Foreign Nationals’ Claims Against Libya Does Not Violate Fifth Amendment

Recent Books on International Law

Book Reviews

Kittrie, Orde F. Lawfare: Law as a Weapon of War (Paul Williams and Laura Livingston) 838

Behrens, Paul. Diplomatic Interference and the Law (Thomas D. Grant) 845

Gallagher, Anne T., and Fiona David. The International Law of Migrant Smuggling (Jaya Ramji-Nogales) 854

Books Received

International Legal Materials. Contents, Vol. 55, No. 4, 5, 6

Table of Cases

Index