About ASIL

ASIL is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, educational membership organization founded in 1906 and chartered by Congress in 1950. The mission of the American Society of International Law is to foster the study of international law and to promote the establishment and maintenance of international relations on the basis of law and justice. ASIL holds Category II Consultative Status to the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations and is a constituent society of the American Council of Learned Societies.

The Society’s 3,500 members from more than 100 nations include attorneys, academics, corporate counsel, judges, representatives of governments and nongovernmental organizations, international civil servants, students and others interested in international law. Through its meetings, publications, information services and outreach programs, ASIL advances international law scholarship and education for international law professionals as well as for broader policy-making audiences and the public.

Dear Colleagues,

A tumultuous year of global crises, both current and impending, has highlighted the importance of international law as an essential tool for the international community to address global problems and to effect change on the international stage. From Venezuela to Brexit, international law is an instrument deployed to complement, to bolster, and to check the formal and informal political processes that shape the future lives of people. In developing this year’s program, we sought to explore the ways in which international law is invoked and deployed as an instrument by national and international actors, both public and private, in addition to the ways in which it serves to constrain these actors.

To this end, we asked panelists and participants to consider a series of questions: How does international law shape the perceptions of the interests and problems of diverse global actors and help frame solutions? Is international legal language a useful medium for the development and dissemination of globalized norms? Under what conditions is international law most effective? Are international institutions effective instruments for addressing complex global challenges?

We do not expect that the Society’s 113th Annual Meeting will provide a definitive answer to all these questions. Rather, we hope that the issues they raise spur a conversation that will help us to understand the ways in which we can better use and develop international law to improve our global community. We look forward to engaging you in this conversation over the coming days.

Thank you for joining us.

Welcome to the 113th Annual Meeting of the American Society of International Law—one of the largest and most diverse gatherings of international lawyers, jurists, scholars, and diplomats in the world. The Annual Meeting offers an unparalleled opportunity to engage in dialogue with leading figures in international law, and to explore virtually every aspect of the field through over 50 substantive programs and seven thematic tracks.

This year’s Annual Meeting theme, International Law as an Instrument, invites us to reflect on the myriad ways in which actors on the global stage use international law to advance their interests, resolve disputes, and address global challenges.

On Wednesday, the Meeting will open with the 21st Annual Grotius Lecture, presented in cooperation with American University Washington College of Law and featuring remarks by Professor Martti Koskenniemi of the University of Helsinki. Professor Koskenniemi will consider the use and efficacy of international law throughout history, in remarks entitled, “Enchanted by the Tools? International Law and Enlightenment.” Professor Anne Orford of the University of Melbourne School of Law will deliver the response.

On Thursday evening, the Society will hold its fourth annual Assembly, featuring honors, awards, memorials, and the election of new members of our Executive Council. Highlights of the Assembly will include the presentation of the Goler T. Butcher Medal to Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein, the former U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights, and the presentation of the first David D. Caron Prize. The Assembly Address will be delivered by this year’s recipient of the Society’s Honorary Member Award, Professor Mónica Pinto of the University of Buenos Aires Faculty of Law. Following the Assembly we will welcome conferees to enjoy the Gala Reception, to be held outdoors in the Heights Courtyard, weather permitting, followed by dessert at the President’s Reception, sponsored by George Washington University Law School.

Our two luncheon programs (both ticketed events) are always special occasions and this year will be no exception. At Thursday’s luncheon we will present the Society’s highest honor, the Manley O. Hudson Medal, to Associate Justice Stephen Breyer of the U.S. Supreme Court. The event will feature a conversation between Justice Breyer and Jennifer Newstead, the Legal Adviser of the U.S. Department of State. On Friday, Tracy Robinson, of the University of the West Indies Faculty of Law, will be the featured speaker at the 26th Annual Women in International Law Interest Group Luncheon, where she will receive the 2019 Prominent Woman in International Law Award.

On Friday evening, we will hear keynote remarks on the future of international criminal justice by Judge Chile Eboe-Osuji, President of the International Criminal Court. The keynote program will be followed by the traditional Members’ Reception and a special screening of the documentary “Prosecuting Evil: The Extraordinary World of Ben Ferencz.” The screening will be preceded by a discussion featuring Ben Ferencz and the film’s producer, Barry Avrich.
Other programs of note will include the seventh annual Charles N. Brower Lecture on International Dispute Resolution, which will be delivered by Judge Peter Tomka of the International Court of Justice, and the fourth annual Detlev F. Vagts Roundtable on Transnational Law, featuring a discussion of “Corporate Liability for Human Rights Violations.”

The conference will conclude on Saturday morning with a plenary session on “International Law as an Instrument for Development.” Sponsored by the City of The Hague and the Embassy of the Netherlands, this high-level discussion will examine the effectiveness and utility of international law as a means of promoting sustainable economic and social development.

Finally, we are pleased to host a special photo exhibit created by the Codification Division of the U.N. Office of Legal Affairs to commemorate the 70th session of the International Law Commission. The exhibit, which will be on display in the main registration area in the Terrace Foyer throughout the Annual Meeting, describes the progressive development of international law over the past two centuries, with particular focus on the contributions of the ILC. The exhibit has previously been seen only at U.N. Headquarters in New York, the Palais des Nations in Geneva, and the Peace Palace in The Hague.

As always, there will be numerous other receptions, meetings, exhibits, and informal opportunities to renew longstanding friendships and develop new ones. If you are a longtime member and you see someone with a “new member” ribbon, please take a moment to introduce yourself and make him or her feel at home.

Finally, we would like to express our deep appreciation to the Annual Meeting Committee, led by co-chairs Rebecca Ingber, Neha Jain, and Rahim Moloo; to our speakers, sponsors, partners and exhibitors; to our event planner, Eden Capuano, and her team at Voila! Inc.; and to the leaders and staff of the Society, who have labored for so many months to create this experience.

Thank you for joining us, and best wishes for a productive and enjoyable meeting.

This 28-chapter volume brings together academics and practitioners to provide a comprehensive legal, economic and political analysis of the Belt and Road (BRI) initiative that has emerged since 2013 as a key feature of China's international economic policy.

"This book is essential reading for anyone who wants to better understand the Belt and Road Initiative and how it will define law, economics, and politics in the years to come."
- Patrick W. Pearsall, Fmr. Chief of Investment Arbitration, United States of America

Catherine Amirfar is a partner in the International Dispute Resolution Group, Co-Chair of the firm’s Public International Law Group, and a member of the firm’s Management Committee. Her practice focuses on public international law, international commercial and treaty arbitration and international and complex commercial litigation. She regularly appears in U.S. Courts and before international courts and arbitration tribunals. Ms. Amirfar has been among the youngest to advocate before the International Court of Justice and is ranked among the top international legal practitioners in the world by Chambers Global (2019) for both public international law and international arbitration. Prior to rejoining Debevoise in 2016, Ms. Amirfar spent two years as the Counselor on International Law to the Legal Adviser at the U.S. Department of State and received the State Department’s Superior Honor Award in recognition of her contributions to the Department.

Ms. Amirfar has served as an ASIL Vice President and currently co-hosts a podcast called “International News Behind the Headlines.” She is a member of the American Law Institute, the Council on Foreign Relations, the State Department’s Advisory Council on International Law, and the Court of Arbitration of the Singapore International Arbitration Centre.
Conference Information

Registration and Name Badges
The Annual Meeting Registration Desk is located in the Terrace Foyer outside the entrance to the Columbia Conference Space.

Registration Hours
Wednesday, March 27 2:00 pm – 6:30 pm
Thursday, March 28 7:30 am – 6:00 pm
Friday, March 29 7:30 am – 6:00 pm
Saturday, March 30 7:30 am – 10:45 am

All conference attendees will receive their conference badge and printed program at either the pre-site or onsite registration desks.

For safety and security reasons, photo ID will be required to pick-up conference badges. Name badges must be worn for admittance to all meetings, sessions, receptions, lunches, and dinner. The badges also contain a bar code for scanning attendance at each session for Continuing Legal Education purposes.

Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credit
The 2019 ASIL Annual Meeting offers attendees more than 40 Continuing Legal Education (CLE) course sessions on a wide variety of topics presented by seasoned international legal experts.

CLE participants will record their attendance with a volunteer using the code on the back of their nametags at the entrance of each session room at the start and end of each scheduled session. Staff and volunteers will be present at each CLE session and can assist you with any questions you may have. Badges will be checked if you exit a session early and partial credit will be given (based on either a 50-minute or 60-minute increment). Data will not be shared with any other organization for any purpose other than state-required audits. Your CLE certificates will be e-mailed to you approximately 6 weeks after the Annual Meeting. If you have questions, please stop by the CLE Help Desk located next to registration in the Terrace Foyer. Please note that CLE credit will be awarded for the states of California, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, with approved jurisdiction credit for New York. All attendees will receive a uniform certificate of attendance. If they are licensed in a state other than those mentioned above, attendee is responsible for obtaining certification through their state board, ASIL will not submit on behalf of the attendee.

Internet Access
Wireless Internet is complimentary in the hotel lobby, and the Annual Meeting has its own Wi-Fi access. The Wi-Fi network is “Hilton Meeting” and the password is “ASIL19”.

Conference Application
The 2019 ASIL Annual Meeting app is available through the app “Attendee Hub,” supported by Cvent. The Annual Meeting app can be found as “ASIL meetings” on the Cvent app. Directions to download the app are available at the ASIL table next to registration.
Social Media
You can follow the 113th ASIL Annual Meeting on Twitter, Facebook, and LinkedIn. Please tweet about the conference using the hashtag #ASILAM.

Electronic Devices
We kindly ask that you silence your electronic devices during the meeting sessions.

Non-Smoking Law
Washington DC law prohibits smoking in all areas of the hotel except for designated smoking guest rooms. Guestrooms and all public spaces at the Washington Hilton are non-smoking.

Photography
ASIL will have a photographer onsite taking photographs in sessions, special events, keynote addresses, and throughout the Hyatt Regency Capitol Hill documenting the 2019 Annual Meeting. Photos and videos taken of attendees during ASIL events will remain the property of ASIL and may be used in future marketing materials.

Recycling
When you are finished with the conference, please recycle your name badge by handing it to the designated registration representative onsite during posted hours.

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) Accommodations
ASIL is able to provide reasonable accommodations for attendees with disabilities, so long as we are informed of your disability in writing prior to our meeting. Please contact Eden Capuano at asilregistration@voilameetings.com, if you have special needs.

International Humanitarian Law
Rules, Controversies, and Solutions to Problems Arising in Warfare
Marco Sassòli
‘There is literally no-one more qualified to write a textbook on international humanitarian law than Marco Sassòli. This book will inevitably become a leading resource in the field. It does not aim to comprehensively cover all of IHL, but focuses on issues and controversies of greatest contemporary relevance, with a remarkable degree of rigour, precision, and clarity.’

Concepts for International Law
Edited by Jean d’Aspremont and Sahib Singh
‘This volume offers an indispensable guide to the concepts that have shaped the life of international law in theory and practice. With contributions from a stellar cast of innovative scholars, Concepts for International Law reveals the power of international legal language and the worlds it makes possible.’

TANG PRIZE

The Tang Prize was founded in December 2012 by Dr. Samuel Yin, who created it as a response to the most pressing problems we humans currently face on this earth, problems wholly different from those we faced 100 years ago. Prizes are awarded in four categories: Sustainable Development, Biopharmaceutical Science, Sinology, and Rule of Law. The prize is currently awarded every two years, with each category awarding a cash prize to at most three outstanding individuals. A total of NT$50 million (US$1.66 million) is awarded in each category (including a NT$40 million cash prize and a NT$10 million research grant). It is known as one of the most prestigious prizes in the world.

THE LAUREATES IN RULE OF LAW

Albie Sachs

“for his many contributions to human rights and justice globally through an understanding of the rule of law in which the dignity of all persons is respected and the strengths and values of all communities are embraced. He is recognized in particular for his efforts in the realization of the rule of law in a free and democratic South Africa, working as an activist, lawyer, scholar, and framer of a new Constitution to heal the divisions of the past and to establish a society that respects diversity and is based on democratic values, social justice and fundamental human rights”

2016
Louise Arbour

“for her enduring contributions to international criminal justice and the protection of human rights, to promoting peace, justice and security at home and abroad, and to working within the law to expand the frontiers of freedom for all”

2018
Joseph Raz

“for his path-breaking contributions to the rule of law, and for deepening our understanding of the very nature of law, legal reasoning, and the relationship between law, morality and freedom”
ASIL would like to extend our sincere appreciation to our special event sponsors.

Victims of Hate Crimes in the Criminal Justice System: A Practical Guide
2:30 pm – 4:00 pm
Fairchild West

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

As hate crimes are a major issue of concern for many Americans and in countries around the world, this 90-minute side event will discuss tools and programs to address hate crimes in the 57 Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) participating States (pSs), with emphasis on meeting the needs of hate crime victims. Speakers from the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR) will be joined by hate crime specialists from US DoJ, DoS and civil society to discuss initiatives to address hate crimes domestically and globally.
National authorities across the OSCE region are responsible for addressing hate crimes, yet are often poorly equipped to do so. Most OSCE participating States (53) have provisions in their criminal codes, which specifically address bias motivation and list protected characteristics. These hate crime laws are, however, often unused, used sporadically, or their application lacks consistency. Specialized training on hate crimes for police or prosecutors, committed to by the participating States in the OSCE commitments, often does not exist or is formalistic and limited in scope. These training gaps are accompanied by missing operational guidance for police and prosecutors. Lack of implementation of criminal hate crime provisions can result in the feeling of impunity for perpetrators, and further deepen mistrust of the victims and their communities towards the criminal justice systems.

Transitional Justice During Conflict: Developments in the MENA Region

Aslı Ü. Bâli, Professor and Faculty Director of the Promise Institute for Human Rights at UCLA Law, will discuss transitional justice initiatives in Libya, Syria, and Yemen. In the midst of armed conflict, transitional justice measures are being promoted in these countries as a response to mass human rights violations. Professor Bâli will put these developments in a regional context and discuss how these initiatives differentially implicate domestic, regional, and international actors.

The United Kingdom’s June 2016 Brexit vote sent shockwaves throughout the European Union and the world. Since the start of negotiations, the complexity and cost of the United Kingdom leaving the European Union has become increasingly evident. Complexity’s Embrace: The International Law Implications of Brexit looks into the deep currents of legal and governance change that will result from the United Kingdom’s departure. Contributors include international law experts and academics from the United Kingdom, Europe and North America who present the challenges of Brexit from different lens and across a wide range of issues including: trade; financial services; cross-border insolvency; intellectual property rights; the environment and human rights.

As the authors of Complexity’s Embrace peel back the layers of this onion and negotiators on both sides try to find an acceptable compromise, the question burns: will the two parties be able to achieve a mutually satisfactory separation agreement?

Sean D. Murphy, Manatt/Ahn Professor of International Law, joined the GW Law faculty in 1998, where for the past two decades he has taught courses in international law, international business transactions, international environmental law, international organizations, and U.S. foreign relations law. His scholarship addresses a range of issues in the field of international law, as well as its connection to U.S. law, with a particular emphasis on international dispute settlement. His most recent books are Litigating War: Mass Civil Injury and the Eritrea-Ethiopia Claims Commission (Oxford University Press, 2013) (with Kidane and Snider); International Law Relating to Islands (Brill Nijhoff, 2017); and Principles of International Law (West Academic, 3d ed., 2018). In addition, he is co-author of the leading casebooks U.S. Foreign Relations Law: Cases, Materials and Practice Exercises (West Academic, 5th ed., 2017) (with Swaine and Wuerth) and International Law: Cases and Materials (West Academic, 7th ed. 2019) (with Damrosch).

Professor Murphy has remained active in the practice of international law. He has served as counsel or expert in cases before numerous international courts and tribunals, including on behalf of Ethiopia, Jordan, Kosovo, Indonesia, Macedonia, Suriname, Uganda, and the United States. He also has been appointed arbitrator in cases held under the auspices of the International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes and the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

In 2011, Professor Murphy was elected to a five-year term on the U.N. International Law Commission and was re-elected for a second five-year term in 2016. In 2014, the commission appointed Professor Murphy as Special Rapporteur for Crimes Against Humanity.

Challenges and Prospects for International Peace and Security: UN peacekeeping, NATO, and the UDHR at 70
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

The end of World War II and the establishment of the United Nations ushered in a new international legal order for the maintenance of international peace and security based on a commitment to multilateralism, non-use of force, and the promotion of human rights. Three important developments emerged shortly thereafter. In 1948, the first U.N. peacekeeping operation was launched, and though such action was not expressly envisaged in the U.N. Charter, it became the dominant means for U.N. efforts to address peace and security. That same year, the U.N. General Assembly adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), partially in recognition that the preservation of such rights made inter-state conflict less likely. And in 1949, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) was created to counterbalance the Eastern bloc, creating stability through deterrence. These three pillars of the international security architecture now enter their eighth decade, but has the world changed since their establishment in ways that challenge their continued viability? U.N. peacekeeping is under-resourced and has struggled to end conflict; a backlash against the idea of universality has placed international human rights under immense pressure; and NATO has arguably failed to deter a resurgent Russia. On the occasion of their 70th anniversary, this roundtable will explore how recent developments have affected these pillars, and in particular, assess whether any or all of them can make an ongoing contribution to peace and security through the “rules-based international order.” Have they failed to deliver on their original promise or have they adapted effectively to contemporary global realities? Is their future dependent on the continuation of Western hegemony and unity? Can they adapt to the changing nature of security threats, rising powers and a waning commitment to multilateralism? Are they instruments for peace, security and the promotion of international law? What challenges and opportunities lie ahead?

Speakers:

- Michael Doyle, Columbia University
- Steven Hill, North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO)
- Bintou Keita, UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations

Obligations to Negotiate and Consult: Worthwhile tool or exercise in futility?
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 1-2
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Are obligations to negotiate or consult a tool of international law which States have at their disposal for helping to resolve their problems? Does the claim of an obligation to negotiate or consult bring States to the negotiating table or does it have the opposite effect? In the same vein, most investment treaties include a clause that encourages or obliges the parties involved in a dispute to engage in consultations and negotiations. In practice, however, is there any evidence, anecdotal or otherwise, that these obligations facilitate settlements? The answers to these questions depend in part on precisely what such obligations actually require States and investors to do. This panel will, through a series of rapid response questions posed by the moderator, consider obligations to negotiate or consult across international legal fora, ranging from the International Court of Justice to investor-state arbitration.

Who’s Minding the Farm? Trade law and agricultural exports
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 3-4
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

It is widely agreed among economists that tariffs remain a major impediment to the financial security of farmers, particularly in the developing world, with clear corresponding implications for the long-term financial feasibility of agriculture in these countries. World Trade Organization members have agreed to eliminate export subsidies for agricultural products and to restrain export measures that have a similar effect on distorting prices in world agricultural markets (“Nairobi Package” 2015). However, despite these stated objectives, geopolitical realities make it clear that we are moving away, rather than towards these goals. For example, U.S. farmers now find the huge Chinese market partially closed in response to the current Administration’s decision to levy tariffs on hundreds of billions of dollars of Chinese goods. In response, the Administration is offering an additional 12 billion dollars in subsidy-like support to U.S. farmers.
Such steps raise questions regarding compliance with international trade agreements, which seek to eliminate subsidies that distort global agricultural markets and that have enormous consequences for farmers in the developing world. A roundtable of agricultural and legal experts will assess the commitments made in the Nairobi package in light of these recent geopolitical developments and discuss the implications of these developments for UN Sustainable Development Goal #2, which aims to “end hunger, achieve food security and improved nutrition and promote sustainable agriculture.”

Fragmentation in International Data Protection Law

9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

In July 2018, Facebook experienced the biggest one-day loss of value in U.S. stock market history, which the company attributed, in part, to concerns about its ability to protect user privacy. The European Union has guaranteed its citizens the right to personal data protection since the adoption of the European Data Protection Directive in 1995, which it later enshrined in the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights (2000) and most recently clarified in its May 2018 General Data Protection Regulation. In contrast to the EU’s fundamental rights approach, the United States has approached the problem of data protection from various sector-specific consumer protection frameworks. These contrasting approaches to data protection have resulted in significant transatlantic trade tensions most recently resolved through the U.S.-EU 2016 Privacy Shield Agreement. While there may be a growing need for legal rules to protect the processing of personal data, differences in cultural and legal approaches may foreclose greater harmonization or internationalization of legal rules in this area. This panel will explore recent efforts to address the issue of data protection at the national and bilateral level, consider the cost of compliance with these conflicting regulations for U.S. companies, and examine whether any multilateral approach to privacy protection is realistically available.

Diverse Perspectives on the Impact of Colonialism in International Law
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 11-12

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Organized by the Minorities in International Law Interest Group

This session, will explore diverse perspectives on the impact and effect of colonialism, and the norms created thereunder, in modern international law. Our first speaker will explore theoretical approaches to the interrelationships between colonialism and international law norms. Other speakers will explore the effect of colonial norms on the development of the modern western notion of the rule of law; the ICJ’s recent Chagos Archipelago Advisory Opinion on self-determination and decolonization; the colonial experience and the development of commercial law in Africa; and the effect of the colonial experience on Latin American perceptions of development and international law.

International Law as a Counterweight to Power Asymmetries in International Politics
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

International law has often been described as the great equalizer, giving States—big and small—an equal voice in international politics. But does international law actually constrain the exercise of power by militarily, politically, or economically stronger States? How well can international courts level the playing field? Under what conditions will they be most effective in this task? Today, there is a widespread sense that the rules-based international order is fraying, that more powerful States are increasingly using strength in international affairs, and that international institutions are less able to restrain actors that decide to work around or opt-out of the system. Revisiting in this new political context the theme of Professor Oscar Schachter’s lecture at the 1999 ASIL Annual Meeting, “The Role of Power in International Law,” this panel will explore the effectiveness of international law as a counterweight to power asymmetries. Some features of the international legal system actually are based on what Philip C. Jessup called “the inescapable fact of power differentials.” But in most respects, international law is built upon the concept of sovereign equality. The panel will explore how less powerful States pursue ways to keep the playing field level, for instance, through the use of contentious cases or advisory opinions at international courts, through resolutions at international organizations, or by the development of new treaty regimes.

Regional Human Rights Bodies as Instruments of International Law
11:00 am – 12:30 am
Columbia 1-2
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Regional human rights bodies function at the center of a paradox. On the one hand, their proximity to the societies they supervise allegedly contributes to their legitimacy and effectiveness. However, this very proximity encourages a regional-approach to universal values that can generate problems of fragmentation, where similar international legal issues receive different, even contradictory, treatment. This panel will focus on a series of topics and cases where regional human rights bodies such as the European Court of Human Rights, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, and the African Court on Human and Peoples’ Rights have adopted widely divergent postures in interpreting similar provisions in their respective treaty instruments. These divergences include the areas of reparations, national security considerations, and the treatment of sexual orientation. The moderator will present a series of topics and cases where the jurisprudence of each human rights body might differ. Panelists will discuss reasons for the different approaches adopted by the regional human rights bodies and explore whether they constitute instances of fragmentation or promotion of underlying universal values.

Moderator: Christina Cerna, Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (retired)
Speakers:
- Elena Abrusci, Human Rights Centre and School of Law, University of Essex
- Thomas Antkowiak, Seattle University School of Law

Emerging Technologies as a Source of Increased IHL Compliance and Enforcement
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 3-4

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Recent discussion concerning emerging technologies and armed conflict have focused almost exclusively on whether these technologies can comply with international humanitarian law (IHL). This is a vital discussion and should certainly continue. However, a useful parallel discussion would contemplate the ways in which emerging technologies could enhance compliance with IHL. Many such technologies may have the potential to provide commanders and other decision makers with increased ability to make key IHL determinations and to conduct hostilities in a way that is more IHL compliant. This session will address the challenges faced by actors in this field and these emerging technologies can assist in IHL compliance.

San Francisco 2.0: Constructing a global governance architecture for the 21st century
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Organized by the International Organizations Interest Group

In 1945, world leaders gathered in San Francisco to sign the UN Charter, which laid the blueprint for the international system in place today. While it was well-suited for the post-World War II era, we now live in a world that is both multipolar and multiconceptual, in which nodes of power do not rest solely with States and the idea of global governance itself is being called into question. Rather than decrying the UN’s shortcomings, let’s be inventors. If the UN didn’t exist, how would we construct it today? With experts from/on government, business, civil society, and international organizations, this simulation explores constitutional questions for a new global governance system. As a threshold matter, is a global governance organization needed? If so, who should be represented? How should it be structured? On the basis of these and other questions, the panel aims to draft a new “Charter” to address current challenges and to explore creative solutions to resolve them.

Moderator: Ian Johnstone, Tufts University

Speakers:
- Lauren C. Baillie, Public International Law & Policy Group
International Law as an Instrument to Regulate the Behavior of Non-state Actors in Areas Beyond National Jurisdiction
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 11-12
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

As more private actors enter ABNJs (private space companies, privately owned cruise vessels in the Arctic and off the coast of Antarctica, deep seabed miners, marine genetic material prospectors), conflicts between users, safety, and environmental damage become increasing concerns. This session will examine the behavior of non-state actors in ABNJs, the role of civil society non-state actors, and the governance role of states, including state responsibility for non-state actors, and the governance role of states. They may consider, for example, state responsibility for non-state actors; the relevance today of norms created at a time when states had the technical know-how (spacecraft, icebreakers) and incentives (science, security) to operate in ABNJs; private property interests and international community interests; and conflict management in BNJ.

The Law (and Politics) of Displacement
1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Migration has been a pressing issue throughout 2018 and 2019, from family separation on the southern U.S. border to the ongoing refugee crises in Myanmar, Syria, and Venezuela. States have resorted to the language of international law to address complex questions related to these and other migratory emergencies, particularly with regard to refugee-related issues. How has international law helped them address or circumvent their responsibilities in these crises? What mechanisms have States established in order to comply with international law? What are the consequences of these law and policies on the ground? This panel will tackle three specific migratory crises: family separations at the Southern U.S. border, the Syrian refugee crisis, and the persecution of the Rohingya in Myanmar. The panelists will focus on the way in which States have invoked and established international law rules and institutions in each situation and the actions they have undertaken to comply with or avoid international legal obligations. Panelists will also discuss whether international law instruments such as the UN Global Compacts on Refugees and the Model International Mobility Convention can provide better solutions than the current international legal framework, or work with existing instruments to guide state action in the face of complex situations.

Moderator: Jill Goldenziel, Marine Corps University – Command and Staff College

Speakers:
- Lindsay Jenkins, UN Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees
- Kristina Campbell, University of the District of Columbia
- Itamar Mann, University of Haifa, Faculty of Law

UNCLOS: A tool for peace and stability?

1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 1-2

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Organized by the Law of the Sea Interest Group

The United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) has been called a Constitution for the Sea. The panel will evaluate whether UNCLOS acts as a legal institution to promote order and peace on the sea either in its codified form or as Customary International Law. Is UNCLOS a tool to alleviate ocean disputes and protect the environment? Or, does it fail to fulfill this role and bring order to the ocean? This will be examined in light of maritime disputes and arbitrations. In particular, panelists will discuss the results of the South China Sea arbitration and whether it has assisted negotiations in the area, whether it has fruitfully clarified entitlements, or whether it has led to a de-legitimization of the system. The panel will also discuss jurisprudence in contentious and advisory cases that have implications for the environmental movement, and broader meaning for UNCLOS jurisdiction. The panel will evaluate whether UNCLOS is a tool to assist the global community on issues that call for a global response. UNCLOS protections for living resources will also be examined; as will conservation of the sea including alleviating pollution and rising sea levels.

Federalism Strikes Back
1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 3-4

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

This panel will focus on the role of the several states and localities within the states, such as cities, in pursuing actions and relationships that shape foreign relations. For example, California, Massachusetts, and other states—on their own or through regional agreements—have enacted laws and regulations seeking to uphold targets and timetables consistent with climate change agreements. On the other side of the Atlantic, in the United Kingdom, sub-federal governments—such as Northern Ireland and Scotland, but also cities like London—have been playing an almost decisive role in the context of Brexit negotiations, holding separate negotiations with the European Union about a potential future relationship. Do these developments signal a new approach to foreign affairs and the end of the one-voice doctrine? The panel examines the current role of sub-federal entities in foreign affairs both within the US and the UK, as well as in cities across the globe.

The Critical Contribution of Law towards Global Efforts to Mitigate Disaster Risk
1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5
Organized by the Disaster Law Interest Group

The scale and impact of disasters is rising exponentially, with insurance sector cost estimates for ‘natural’ disasters increasing from $188 billion (2016) to $300 billion (2017). In response, the global shift since the 1990s, reflected in the Sendai Framework on Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR) (2015-2030), has been towards concentrating resources on disaster prevention and mitigation, including through improved preparedness and response mechanisms. The Sendai Framework establishes ambitious goals, exhorting the development of innovative approaches and dynamic cross-sectoral partnerships. Yet, to date, the legal community has largely not been fully integrated into existing efforts or collaborations, including with the scientific, technological or health sectors. This is partly attributable to commonly poor levels of understanding about the dynamic role of law as a tool of disaster risk mitigation, including developing DRR law. As this panel explores, there is a critical need for public/private stakeholders, whether national or international, to more actively draw upon and embed legal instruments (e.g. international human rights, environmental, disaster, health and maritime law) within their mechanisms and responses to reduce disaster risk and impacts: for instance, through improving consistency and coherence of standards, strengthening existing weak governance mechanisms, ensuring greater compliance and accountability, whilst better protecting vulnerable populations.

Senate v. President: A Moot Court on Treaty Withdrawal Powers
3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Recent skepticism of long-standing U.S. alliances and international institutions has reinvigorated the debate over the respective roles of the President and Congress in the withdrawal of the United States from treaties. One area where this issue has arisen concerns the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), where President Trump reportedly has suggested the possibility of a U.S. withdrawal, which in turn has triggered some calls in Congress for legislation that would preclude him from doing so. Using this as the backdrop, this session will take the form of a moot court to explore the extent of congressional vs. executive control over U.S. withdrawal from NATO. The session will address questions about the evolution of U.S. practice leading to the contemporary mainstream position asserting unilateral presidential withdrawal authority where a treaty itself contemplates withdrawal (as does the NATO treaty), what constitutional limits (if any) there are on that authority, and what may be learned from treaty withdrawal debates in other countries, including the United Kingdom’s withdrawal from the European Union. The session will also look at the extent to which the Youngstown framework may support shared, as opposed to exclusive, authority over treaty withdrawal, particularly in light of the Supreme Court’s 2015 decision in Zivotofsky v. Kerry.

This session made possible by a generous contribution from the Vagts Family

In Jesner v. Arab Bank, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the Alien Tort Statute could not be used to sue foreign corporations for human rights violations. This Roundtable will discuss possibilities for human rights suits against both U.S. and foreign corporations after Jesner. The paper will focus on European rules of jurisdiction and will outline the options for civil cases in Europe. The commentators will discuss the possibilities of U.S. and non-U.S. litigation from doctrinal, empirical, and litigation perspectives.

Deep Seabed Mining in Crowded Oceans
3:00 – 4:30 pm
Columbia 3-4
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Twenty-five years after entry into force of the U.N. Convention on the Law of the Sea, the International Seabed Authority (ISA)’s efforts to regulate deep seabed mining present a salient case study in the challenges facing international organizations with respect to common ocean spaces. Set up to administer what was once regarded as a relatively empty and remote terrain, the ISA must now contend with crowded oceans: crowded with multiple users laying claim to the same areas, with overlapping jurisdictional regimes, and with fundamentally different conceptions of what sharing the ocean commons should mean. These tensions are increasingly coming to a head in the drafting of the ISA’s mining code. Here, the ISA must balance a regime that is attractive to investors with one which meets developing States’ needs for equitable sharing of benefits. At the same time, it must respond to NGOs’ demands for effective protection of the marine environment and accommodate the growing strategic and political importance which certain States attach to seabed mining operations and other uses in our ever-shrinking oceans, including shipping, fishing, and laying submarine cables. Does the ISA have the capacity to manage these competing legal, economic, and environmental imperatives? Through what means should it engage with parallel and competing regimes of ocean use? Whose concerns will our deep seabed mining regime vindicate?

The Remedial Function in International Economic Law

3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 9-10
Organized by the International Economic Law Interest Group

Remedies are a perennial problem in international trade and investment law. Much attention has been given to difficulties with the technical calculation of damages in the context of investor-state dispute settlement (ISDS), or disentangling the remedial possibilities under the World Trade Organization rules or under free trade agreements. These questions are interesting and important. But this session will not linger on this well-trodden ground. Instead, participants will explore, compare, and reassess the remedial standards in both fields from the perspective of function and policy. As a baseline, it is clear that trade remedies are designed to be prospective, while remedies in ISDS are retrospective and compensatory. But to what end? What are the functions of these very different approaches? What policy aims are they designed to pursue? And how effective are they? Beyond mere enforceability, are the remedial aspects of these regimes fulfilling their purported functions? What ancillary legal concepts remain underdeveloped? The session will explore and compare the nature, function, and goals of the remedial systems in trade and investment as designed. The speakers will then turn to how these systems have developed in practice. The panel will consider what kinds of remedies are actually available (such as damages, preliminary measures, specific performance, and countermeasures), and whether they should be interchangeable. The panel will also explore the appropriate and available standards of damages (fair market value, reliance, restitution, etc.), as well as ancillary remedial concepts that may be underdeveloped in international case law (e.g., causation, mitigation, the presumption against speculative damages, and the new business rule). The panel will then turn to how these remedial mechanisms work in practice. The speakers will examine how effective they are in view of their intended ends. The panel will also examine whether these systems have developed new or underappreciated functions in practice.

Preventing Violence and Atrocities through International Disarmament Law
3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 11-12
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5
Organized by the Nonproliferation, Arms Control, and Disarmament Interest Group

In the past five years, two landmark disarmament treaties were adopted: the Arms Trade Treaty and the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons. Both were the result of sustained advocacy by civil society to develop disarmament law and arms control policies that would be effective at preventing violence and atrocities. This panel will discuss how relevant international stakeholders, including non-governmental organizations, governments and the UN community, use disarmament law and policy to prevent daily violence and mass atrocities. Panelists will discuss the development of the Arms Trade Treaty, the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons, and the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, their contributions to international disarmament law, their potential and actual impacts, as well as their gaps and limitations.

This event is part of the Society’s Signature Topic on “Atrocity Prevention: The Role of International Law and Justice.”

Debate: Designing the Investor State Dispute Resolution System from Scratch
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

How would or should the investor-State dispute settlement system look if we had to start from scratch? This session will be an Oxford Union style debate with the resolution: “This house would design the investor-state dispute resolution system from scratch.” Among other things, the debate will consider various system-design issues such as: (a) ad hoc versus standing body; (b) “double hatting” of arbitrators; (c) unilateral versus institutional appointments; (d) appellate review, and if so by whom. The debate will also consider whether the rules amendments of ICSID go far enough to address current controversies.

Litigating Climate Change: New legal challenges
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 1-2

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Numerous lawsuits are being filed all over the world against a host of defendants, including multinational companies and governments, alleging that they are to blame for climate change that results in a violation of either national laws or international law. As examples: (a) nearly 900 Dutch citizens have filed a lawsuit in a district court in the Netherlands seeking that the court order the government to cut greenhouse gas emissions faster; (b) Greenpeace has appealed after an Oslo court rejected its argument that Norway’s oil and gas exploration in the Arctic violates citizens’ rights to a clean environment; (c) a Peruvian farmer who lives in Huarez, Peru, has brought a lawsuit against a German electricity producer alleging that it knowingly contributed to climate change by emitting greenhouse gases that bore some responsibility for the melting of mountain glaciers located near his hometown; and (d) a number of U.S. cities, such as New York, Oakland, and San Francisco, have filed climate change lawsuits against oil companies seeking to recover the cost of infrastructure needed to protect against rising sea levels. Additionally, the Permanent Court of Arbitration has advocated for the use of arbitration to resolve climate-change disputes, including disputes arising under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Paris Agreement. The panel will discuss these recent cases, as well as the success or failure of earlier litigation, with a view to understanding the role that international law will play in the climate change debate.

Legal Techniques for Resolving Armed Conflicts with Non-state Actors
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 3-4
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

In an age when armed conflicts with non-state actors are increasing around the world, often with no clear end in sight, international law and institutions play a critical but often hidden role in resolving such conflicts. From international lawyers negotiating the terms of ceasefire agreements and peace treaties to international institutions facilitating transitional justice and economic stability, international law and institutions are important instruments for addressing today’s conflicts. This rapid-response discussion will highlight the unique experience and expertise of a diverse set of players who use international law or institutions to resolve armed conflicts involving non-state actors in a diverse range of entities from ISIS to the FARC. Experts will address such questions as how does one begin negotiating a peace deal with a non-state actor? What role does international law play in such agreements? What security, economic, or political conditions are essential for ending these types of armed conflicts? Are international law and its related institutions effective instruments for facilitating an end to such conflicts or have they failed to adapt to today’s conflicts?

Assessing Professional and Judicial Integrity in International Tribunals
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours (Ethics): 1.5
Organized by the Anti-Corruption Law Interest Group

Although judges, arbitrators, and counsel in international tribunals face professional ethical dilemmas just like their domestic counterparts, the existing mechanisms in place to maintain professional integrity in international tribunals suffer from significant gaps. The lack of common and agreed upon ethical norms in international dispute resolution raises a variety of procedural and substantive concerns. Procedurally, it is unclear what ethics rules apply and how to resolve conflicts of interest. Substantively, the outcomes of some international court decisions concerning judges’ or arbitrators’ behaviors have been criticized on the basis of underlying conflicts. Ethical concerns are particularly important in investment arbitration and have prompted calls for reform of the Investor-State Dispute Settlement (ISDS) system. The problems, however, are not limited to ISDS. This panel will address issues of professional ethics in international adjudication. Panelists will explore issues common to all international proceedings, from the perspective of both international judges and counselors and will seek to identify the deficiencies that should be addressed most urgently. These issues would include, among others, conflict of interest, attorney and judicial ethics, and the adequacy of existing codes of ethics.

Late Breaking Panel: BREXIT and International Law
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 11-12
Sponsored by the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI)

The United Kingdom is scheduled to leave the European Union on Friday, March 29, 2019, having invoked Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty two years prior, in 2017. Much is still unknown about the UK’s impending exit, including whether an alternative agreement will be put in place, or whether the exit will take place as planned, on March 29, at all. But the plan to withdraw and the ongoing negotiations between the UK and the EU raise significant questions for both bodies, for their trading partners and allies, for corporate actors and investors, and for international law. This late-breaking panel will bring together experts from the UK, the EU, and others to discuss the international legal implications of Brexit and what role international law is likely to play in structuring, constraining, and enabling various political, economic, and cultural arrangements between actors both within and outside the UK.

Anatomy of a Trade War

11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5
Following the tit-for-tat unilateral tariff measures implemented by the Trump Administration and U.S. trading partners in 2018, the viability of the multilateral trading regime is in question. The primary objective of that regime has been to promote global economic welfare by increasing the productivity of capital, labor, and agriculture. However, as economic integration and international trade commitments have deepened, the multilateral trading regime has clashed with competing national policy priorities most recently advanced through unilateral trade remedies. Do these recent measures signal a rise in economic nationalism and the downfall of the multilateral trading system? Do unilateral trade measures have any place in a multilateral, rules-based trading system? What is the effect of unilateral trade measures targeting specific industries or regions on the way U.S. trade policy is made? This session seeks to address the impact of the burgeoning trade war on the U.S. heartland, where these tit-for-tat tariff measures are both intended to help and expected to hurt. While the trade war is a moving target, the policies on the table now will continue to raise serious questions about the appropriate balance between national trade remedies and international trade law whether one is watching from the WTO, Washington, or Wichita.

A State’s Many Roles in International Adjudication
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 1-2
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

States have many different roles and interests in international adjudication, which may overlap and vary in importance from case to case. States’ sovereignty endows them with a special character and responsibilities in international litigation. States are heterogeneous, comprised of various national and subnational entities, and are often encumbered by laws, national constituencies, or limited resources. States often view their interests and responsibilities as extending beyond any particular dispute, and their pleadings and submissions create state practice and opinio juris. This panel seeks to shed light on States’ manifold roles and interests in international adjudication and to examine how governments and their advisers might reconcile and protect these roles and interests.

Who Speaks for Earth? International law and interstellar events
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 3-4

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

This session will examine what international law governs, or should govern, non-commercial State cooperation in space to address threats to global security. Through two hypotheticals, a panel of scientific experts and international and national security lawyers would examine the central question of who is empowered to make space-related decisions that could have profound effects on humankind. Hypothetical one is defensive – if a devastating asteroid is headed towards Earth, do capable states have individual or collective responsibilities to attempt to stop it? What bearing do arms control treaties have on the repurposing of anti-satellite weapons for the global defense? What is the Security Council’s role under Chapter VII? If a state does attempt to intervene, may other states cite to Article VI and VII of the Outer Space Treaty or other sources of international law to hold it liable for any harm that results despite its efforts? Hypothetical two is affirmative – looking at previous efforts to reveal Earth and earthlings to sentient alien life forms, such as NASA’s Voyager 1 and 2 Golden Records, and potential new attempts including Yuri Milner’s Breakthrough Message competition. Does international law speak to whether one state, or a group of states, may broadcast Earth-identifying signals into space or to answer signals detected from an alien source? If it does not, what if any international legal rules or processes should be developed? What actors within a state should be able to speak for it – should government control such actions or are they fair game for private citizens?

Climate Change as a Concern in Negotiating Mine Development Agreements
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Organized by the Private International Law Interest Group

Should new mine development agreement include climate change mitigation as a consideration? The IBA’s Model Mine Development Agreement addresses both environmental and social policies throughout the draft agreement. It does not, however, deal directly with climate change-related policies or with climate change-related mitigation efforts. This session will address how such issues might arise in the context of a mine development negotiation. The session will bring together four actors for a negotiation session at the beginning stages of negotiations of a mine development agreement – a host government representative, outside counsel for the international mining company, an NGO invited by the government particularly to address the concerns of indigenous peoples affected by the project and an academic participating as an expert with potential sway with a multilateral lending institution that could assist with funding for the project. The mock negotiations will focus on the broad concepts to be applied by the parties to address climate change mitigation in the mine development agreement. Following the mock negotiations, the players will step out of their roles to discuss the negotiation progress with the audience and highlight the conceptual challenges encountered by parties wishing to enter into a productive dialogue on climate change related questions of sustainable development and social licenses to operate.

Late Breaking Panel: Crisis in Venezuela
11:00 am – 12:30 pm
Columbia 11-12

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Venezuela, until recently considered the richest country in South America, is in turmoil. The country has insufficient food and medicine for its people, has defaulted on billions of dollars in debt obligations, is subject to crippling sanctions, and now faces a constitutional crisis with both Nicolás Maduro and Juan Guaidó claiming to be the rightful president of the Republic. The two rival governments are fighting for legitimacy in the eyes of their people and the international community, leading, among other things, to a crisis over the receipt of foreign aid and ownership over foreign state assets. The U.S., along with a growing number of other nations, has recognized Guaidó, the President of the National Assembly, as the interim President citing irregularities in the election process through which Maduro claimed the Presidency. On the other hand, others (both inside and outside Venezuela) still recognize Maduro’s authority. The current crisis raises new questions for governments, multinationals, aid agencies and counsel on their legal rights and obligations vis-à-vis Venezuela. This late-breaking panel will discuss the role of international law in this evolving crisis.

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

At the twenty-fourth Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) in December 2018, Parties adopted the so-called Paris “rulebook,” a set of key implementation guidelines called for in the Paris Agreement. Following this pivotal meeting, a roundtable of experts familiar with the negotiation of the Agreement, the rulebook, and its implementation to date will discuss the innovative structural features of the Paris Agreement (e.g., a hybrid of legally-binding and non-binding provisions; self-determined national contributions; a role for non-state actors, etc.) and highlight textual compromises that were essential for achieving consensus on the Agreement and the rulebook. Have these innovations and compromises succeeded in achieving buy-in and national action from all countries? Does the structure of the Paris Agreement provide the best framework for addressing the collective action challenges of climate change? Does this model have any drawbacks or room for improvements? Looking at other recent and ongoing multilateral environmental negotiations, is the traditional form of binding multilateral environmental agreements a thing of the past? Can the Paris model or variations thereof be useful in tackling other collective action environmental challenges confronting states today?

Sovereign Immunity Revisited: Immunity of states and their officials for atrocities or terrorist acts

1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 1-2

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

This session would explore and assess key national and international developments in the law of sovereign immunity. In 2018, the U.S. Supreme Court decided Rubin v. Iran, barring the attachment of Iranian antiquities located in the U.S. to execute judgments against Iran issued under the terrorism exception to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA). Furthermore, the Justice Against Sponsors of Terrorist Act (JASTA) was enacted in 2016, essentially broadening the terrorism exception to FSIA. Also in 2016, the Supreme Court decided Bank Markazi v. Peterson, in which it sanctioned the turnover of about $1.75 billion in Central Bank of Iran assets to families of victims of terrorism. Subsequently, Iran brought a case against the United States at the International Court of Justice (ICJ). Finally, [the African Union has successfully spearheaded efforts [are currently underway] at the United Nations to secure an ICJ advisory opinion on the immunity of heads of state and other senior officials, against the backdrop of attempts to prosecute Sudan’s President Omar al-Bashir at the International Criminal Court. These developments highlight the tension between immunity and impunity when it comes to states and leaders engaged in terrorism or grave human rights violations. The panel will consider how recent U.S. cases and legislation have addressed this tension, and whether they are consistent with the international law on immunity. Questions will be posed by the moderator for rapid response by speakers addressing whether such immunity ought to be qualified in cases involving terrorism or grave human rights violations, and what, if any, other legal tools are available for addressing impunity in such cases.
International Disability Law and the Experience of Marginality
1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 3-4
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Disability issues increasingly shape the content of international law, including intellectual property law, humanitarian law, criminal law, and immigration and refugee law. But are disability issues fully integrated into the agendas of international law and institutions? Does disability as a “rights marker” generate normative, theoretical, and empirical avenues to interrogate issues of intersectionality? And are international legal institutions effective instruments for addressing disability, which directly affects at least fifteen percent of people globally? This panel will engage cutting edge questions related to how international law and institutions address disability rights and whether they can do more. Panelists will speak to how international human rights law addresses or evades the interaction of multiple categories of difference or experiences of marginality; critically evaluate international-level efforts to integrate disability concerns; interrogate the ability of international human rights law to address issues of identity or marker intersectionality; and propose measures to strengthen international law to tackle disability concerns and rights intersectionality more broadly.

Courts and Anti-Migrant Border Policy: The transnational litigation landscape
1:00 pm – 2:30 pm
Columbia 9-10
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5/2.0
Organized by the Migration Law Interest Group

This session will examine how policies designed to restrict migration at the fault lines between the “global north” and the “global south” have been challenged through litigation initiatives. Looking at examples from the US, the European external borders, and the Australian-pacific region, speakers will comparatively examine migration or refugee bans for particular religious or ethnic groups, and the historical origins of such bans; family separations and their review by immigration tribunals, and the extent to which governments are cooperating transnationally to consolidate anti-migrant border governance regimes. Speakers will also reflect on the role of litigation and courts in political campaigns aiming to foster greater transnational movement and regional integration.

The 7th Annual Charles N. Brower Lecture: A Century of Dispute Settlement through International Law (1919-2019): The role of multilateralism

3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 5-8

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

The Seventh Annual Charles N. Brower Lecture on International Dispute Resolution will be presented at the 2019 ASIL Annual Meeting by Judge Peter Tomka of the International Court of Justice. Judge Tomka served in the Foreign Ministry of Czechoslovakia and Slovakia and later as Slovakia’s Ambassador to the United Nations. He served as a member of the United Nations International Law Commission before being elected to the International Court of Justice in 2003. Judge Tomka previously served as President of the International Court of Justice. He is the honorary president of the Slovak Society of International Law. The Brower lecture is named in honor of Judge Charles N. Brower for his many contributions to the field of international law.

Distinguished Speaker: Judge Peter Tomka, International Court of Justice
The Last Drop: Practical tools for addressing transboundary water crises
3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 1-2

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Global water crises are recognized as one of the biggest threats facing the planet, raising concerns about scarcity, environmental impact, and the potential for violent conflict. With more than 270 rivers and 600 aquifers crossing an international boundary, international cooperation is an essential condition for the optimal management and utilization of freshwater resources. Yet, as consumption continues to increase, to what extent are current mechanisms for the governance of transboundary water resources adequate to face the challenges posed by population growth, geo-politics, climate change, extreme weather events, and political instability? This panel, consisting of experts from different regions and institutions, will examine this question by focusing on a few current, real-world case studies. The panel will discuss how existing governance frameworks are faring under crisis and whether – drawing from other transboundary freshwater management mechanisms across the world – there might be other practical tools or best practices that could be applied to help mitigate the situation.

The American Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples 2016
3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 3-4

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

The American Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People (ADRIP) was adopted by the Organization of American States (OAS) on June 15, 2016, after 17 years of negotiations. The Declaration is the first international instrument on Indigenous peoples’ rights to have been adopted since the 2007 UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. It is a major contribution to standard–setting on Indigenous peoples’ rights in international law and is likely to be brought to bear on the practices of OAS members through the jurisprudence of the Inter-American system of human rights. The ADRIP extends the corpus of international human rights law by including protections not found elsewhere. This event proposes to discuss the significance of the ADRIP and critically consider the uses that might be made of it as an instrument to further Indigenous peoples aspirations in the Americas and globally.

Tabletop Simulation: Atrocity Prevention Decision-Making in the U.S. Government
3:00 pm – 4:30 pm
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

This event will explore the interplay of law and diplomacy through a tabletop simulation showing how the U.S. interagency might respond to an unfolding mass atrocity. Rather than a traditional panel of presenters, the participants – all of whom were actively involved in these issues while in government -- will assume roles of Executive branch participants (State, DOD, Justice, Treasury, USAID, intelligence community, NSC) as the moderator presents the participants with information and reports about an emerging crisis. Participants would highlight the various atrocity prevention and response tools from which different entities can draw, identify domestic and international legal constraints, and explain other issues that affect their ability to respond effectively. Over the course of the session, the participants would canvass the different atrocity prevention responses available (diplomacy, sanctions, various forms of intervention within the framework of R2P or otherwise, and accountability mechanisms), explore how these tools can reinforce or conflict with each other, and reenact how the U.S. government interfaces with its allies and potential spoilers who will also be reacting to the situation.

This event is part of the Society’s Signature Topic on "Atrocity Prevention: The Role of International Law and Justice."

Moderator: Anna Cave, Ferencz International Justice Initiative, United States Holocaust Memorial Museum

Director Barry Avrich’s gripping new documentary tells the fascinating story of Ben Ferencz—the last surviving Nuremberg prosecutor and lifelong advocate of “law not war.” After witnessing Nazi concentration camps shortly after liberation, Ferencz became the lead prosecutor in the Einsatzgruppen case at Nuremberg, which has been called the biggest murder trial in history. All 22 Nazi officials tried for murdering over a million Jews were convicted. Ferencz went on to advocate for restitution for Jewish victims of the Holocaust and later for the establishment of the International Criminal Court. A longtime member and patron of ASIL, his fight for justice for victims of atrocity crimes continues today.

Emerging Accountability Mechanisms: Innovative or ineffective?
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 5-8
CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Mechanisms of accountability for serious human rights violations and war crimes have taken a wide variety of shapes and forms, with international and hybrid criminal tribunals as the most visible model, followed by prosecutions in national courts. More recently, particularly when the use of such courts or tribunals has not been possible, alternative accountability mechanisms have emerged, from investigative institutions to transitional justice mechanisms. In Syria, the UN General Assembly created an International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism (IIIM) to assist in the investigation and prosecution of persons responsible for the most serious crimes during the Syrian Civil War. As the IIIM itself states, it is neither a prosecutor’s office nor a court, but a collector and analyzer of information and evidence looking to assist future criminal proceedings, whether those occur in an international tribunal or national court. Will this be an effective way to promote accountability? In Colombia, the recent Peace Agreement with the FARC armed group created the Special Jurisdiction for Peace (SJP), which resembles a traditional hybrid court, but is conceived of as a unique transitional justice mechanism geared towards reconciliation rather than punishment. The Agreement garnered criticism from human rights groups as a source for potential impunity for war criminals. Can this non-retributive form of justice appropriately promote accountability? How will this process work in parallel with the ICC preliminary examination proceedings for Colombia? This panel will explore the evolution, current status, and future of these “non-traditional” accountability mechanisms: the IIIM in Syria and the SJP in Colombia.

Moderator: Saira Mohamed, UC Berkeley School of Law

The European Commission and International Investment Arbitration

9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 1-2

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

The European Commission recently emerged as a dominant actor in international investment arbitration, shaping the reform agenda, urging a new dispute-resolution system, intervening in investment disputes, and requiring Member States both to terminate intra-EU investment treaties and decline to pay arbitral awards arising from them. In Achmea v. Slovak Republic, the Court of Justice of the European Union endorsed the Commission’s view that EU law precludes application of an ISDS clause in a bilateral investment treaty between two Member States. Does the court’s reasoning extend to all Member State investment treaties, or even to agreements to which the EU itself is a party, such as the Energy Charter Treaty? What are the implications of these developments for States, investors, and interested third parties?

Theft in War: Using international law to rein in pillage of natural resources

9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 3-4

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

The prohibition on pillage (theft) during war is a fundamental rule of international humanitarian law (IHL). When thinking about pillage, we usually envision invading armies storming villages for spoils of war. Yet, contemporary wars, and particularly natural resource wars, present complex questions on the scope and potential of the prohibition of pillage. While a belligerent may use natural resources of an occupied territory for the needs of the occupied population and to sustain its own forces, when does such use cross the line so as to constitute pillage? For instance, can pillage include granting concessions to corporations in conflict areas? Likewise, can land use by an occupying power amount, under some circumstances, to pillage? In recent years, the prohibition on pillage is increasingly used to address the growing problem of illegal exploitation of natural resources. The examples are numerous: the International Court of Justice found Uganda responsible for pillage of Congolese natural resources more than a decade ago. Since then, the Canadian and Dutch governments sponsored a major international conference at on pillage of natural resources; Swiss authorities began a formal criminal investigation against one of the leading gold refineries in the world; and Belgian authorities arrested a businessman for allegedly pillaging “blood diamonds” from Sierra Leone. Significantly, in recent months, the International Criminal Court announced a new prosecutorial policy that would give particular consideration to illegal exploitation of natural resources. Finally, the U.S. State Department created a new $2 million project to focus on training Congolese prosecutors on how to pursue these cases. Clearly, the legal fight against pillage is of growing importance in international law. What are the advantages and shortcoming of this development?

Asia’s Response to the US Indo-Pacific Strategy
9:00 am – 10:30 am
Columbia 9-10

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5

Organized by the Law in the Pacific Rim Region Interest Group

In 2018, the Trump Administration declared the “Free and Open Indo-Pacific” strategy as the new U.S. policy on Asia. The new Indo-Pacific strategy is expected to have far-reaching implications for U.S.-Asia relations. This roundtable will explore some of those issues, in particular, the impact of mega-free trade agreements and South China Sea disputes on international trade. Participants will discuss the extent to which international law facilitates or hinders US trade goals; the legal and political responses to U.S. policy available to nations in the Asia-Pacific Region; how recent diplomatic developments in China and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) might serve as a counter-balance towards perceived U.S. unilateralism; and whether alternative strategies, such as the CPTPP, the RCEP and the Belt and Road Initiative, might shape international law and commercial transactions.

International Law Review Editors Roundtable
Cardozo

In recognition of the important role that student-edited international law journals play in the dissemination of international legal scholarship, this year the Society is inaugurating a new program as part of the Annual Meeting, the International Law Review Editor Roundtable. This Roundtable will discuss key issues around legal scholarship, including: selecting great topics that might be more relevant to the various audiences of law journals, including scholars and practitioners; how international law journals can be more effective at soliciting and/or selecting relevant pieces of international legal scholarship; and how to work with authors (who may have different cultural perspectives) to successfully publish their pieces. The Roundtable will be facilitated by international law experts as well as sitting editors-in-chief of law student-run international law journals. The Society invites current students and recent graduates interested in the process of scholarship and publication in international law to connect with their peers and distinguished scholars and practitioners.

CLE Credit Hours: 1.5
Co-sponsored by the Municipality of The Hague and Asser Institute for International and European Law

International law has long been used as an instrument for economic development. Indeed, international rules and institutions have promoted trade and investment across borders, developed traditional and innovative techniques for monitoring implementation and resolving disputes, and helped harmonize development-related rules with other fields of international law, including human rights law and international environmental law. The 2015 UN Sustainable Development Goals set an optimistic agenda for using international law as a tool for accomplishing economic and human development in a sustainable manner between now and 2030. At the same time, studies indicate that while international programs of economic development have improved conditions for the worst off globally, nevertheless global economic inequality remains on the rise. Further, global competition, trends towards protectionism, and rapidly changing technology, all offer significant challenges to the use of international law to promote economic development, with natural disasters and climate change raising the spectre of long-term risk to economic growth, especially in developing nations. As such, leading figures... question the efficacy of the use of international law and institutions to promote economic development. The closing plenary of the 2019 ASIL Annual meeting will bring together leading diplomats, practitioners, and academics to consider the past, present and future use of international law as an instrument for economic and human development. What has worked? What has not worked? What changes are needed for the future?

GENERAL EDITOR
Professor Hélène Ruiz Fabri
Director of the Max Planck Institute Luxembourg for International, European and Regulatory Procedural Law

The Max Planck Encyclopedia of International Procedural Law (MPEiPro) maps and analyzes the systems and processes through which international law is made, interpreted, and adjudicated in practice. It takes a broad view of international procedure, examining it from three different angles: technical points of procedure within specific institutions or across similar organizations; comparative accounts of families of institutions within specific subject areas or with similar functions; and theoretical, interdisciplinary entries.

www.mpeipro.com

- Provides cutting edge research on every aspect of international procedural law, showing how it is made, interpreted, and adjudicated in practice.
- Draws on expert cross-disciplinary analysis, examining the historical, theoretical, and sociological aspects of procedure.
- Features entries on key individual institutions as well as important points of procedure.
- Written by a team of experts from academia and practice, and edited by the Max Planck Institute Luxembourg, under the leadership of Hélène Ruiz Fabri.
- Ultimately featuring over 1,000 articles, which will be regularly updated.
- Rigorously peer reviewed by a panel of 60 top-level academics and practitioners, including international judges and arbitrators.

The Latest in Trade Law from Cambridge

For more details on these titles and others, please visit Cambridge.org
The purpose of the ASIL Studies in International Legal Theory is to clarify and improve the theoretical foundations of international law. Too often the progressive development and implementation of international law has foundered on confusion about first principles. This series raises the level of public and scholarly discussion about the structure and purposes of the world legal order and how best to achieve global justice through law. This series grows out of the International Legal Theory project of the American Society of International Law. The ASIL Studies in International Legal Theory deepen this conversation by publishing scholarly monographs and edited volumes of essays considering subjects in international legal theory.
